

Bradwell News - 100th Edition

Your village newsletter celebrates its 100th edition this month. It seems a long time since the very first edition, in July 2002. In that month in 2002 Steve Fossett became the first person to fly solo around the world non-stop in a balloon, the African Union was established in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia under South African President, Thabo Mbeki, during Bastille Day celebrations in Paris, Jacques Chirac escaped an assassination attempt - and the Bradwell News was launched upon an unsuspecting public!

The People Who Make It Work

Bradwell News relies on the goodwill of a small number of dedicated people who freely give up their time to collect material together, work with advertisers, edit and compile the newsletter, collect and prepare the final paper and deliver to every house in the village.

Our team of volunteers work tirelessly month after month to make sure that your copy drops through the letter box, with news of all the "goings on" in the village.

During September a few of us and our partners got together for a barbecue to celebrate 100 editions of Bradda News and to plan the next 100. We were sad that not all our team could attend, but as you can see, a goodly few were captured on this photo.

The original editorial team comprised:

- Liz and Ian Fullilove
  - Martin Cliffe
  - Joyce Emson
  - Janet Kobayashi
- None of these good people

The MAP

On the reverse of this sheet you will see a map of our village. It was initially sketched by Ellie Dunn and artistically finished by Keith Brett and they both donated their time to the project. In fact, the project is a Parish Council led initiative to produce a village map showing local services and amenities to help visitors find their way around.

Very soon a final version of the map will be appearing on a board in the centre of the village, suitably marked with pubs, churches and bus routes. It will also be bordered with sketches kindly donated to the project by Alan Hearsom.

We are indebted to all three people for donating their time and skills to the project.
